the class of 1968
presents
this edition of the weather vane

the dedication

The Class of 1968 dedicates this volume of the Weather Vane to a man with a cheerful "Hi" for everyone and a ready willingness to lend a helping hand. This graduating class will always remember the smiling face of

SONNY VAN SHAW

In appreciation . . .

for his generous donation of time and equipment the 1968 Weather Vane staff would like to thank

o You From Me
don't know you;
d yet I put my mind into your hands—
ipped like a plastic model.
has fallen in your hands,
t placed there by my choice.
is my mind complete,
iscaled, ungutted, not deodorized;
d naked shining in the light—

mind that lived in a way your mind ay not accept; a mind that has lived a way perhaps yours never will;
d yet, it's your mind too—
part of it.

on't be afraid . . . go ahead—look in and wonder,
in, frown, or throw my mind aside as st another stone that skitters, and then sinks low the shining water of our being . . .

nd don't tell lies . . . don't say you understand hat I'm trying to say.
r, if you do, you truly lie—
d don't say to me it's nonsense.
r if you do, I'll know your just reading
e words—and don't say it's the truth;
r this is clearly marked in every space.
st do me the courtesy of saying nothing,
being confused, of looking up mid-sentence d thinking your own thoughts.

I don't know where
But it takes me there.
It leaves me cold
In a warm heart.

Somewhere there is a time
That holds existance and soul.
I'll thrive in minds,
Alive!

It is a mystery to nature
It's instituted between flesh and divinity.
It's lost in answers,
Lost!

Can sand be found in sand
Or stars in stars?
Is the unknown found
With time?

Well it's the time of Life I need
Not the time of day.
I've got the scent and
I'm following its end.

Follow me, leave me,
I'm living for death.
Learning how to embalm myself
For a concentrating experienced entrance!

When I am dead Spare the thorn from the thistle,
And plant wheat to feed my soul.
Fill this empty space with
hours of expression,
Rather than angered gargoyles.
Stare not into the grave
But beyond the future.
Only your thought will Overflow into my coffin.
Fear not my flesh
For it is only a fetter of skin.
In giving up life,
I take the world.

Northern Liberal

And so we lick our chops at Birmingham and say, "See!
Southern dogs have vindicated me—
I knew that this would come."
But who are we to be so proud that savages
have proven a point
taken late in time
to show how liberal I am?
Above the struggle
I can quite afford to be:
well-fed, degreed,
not beat—elite,
up North.
I send checks,
support your cause,
and lick my chops
at Jim Crow laws
and Birmingham—
where you,
not I am.

It would be too bad if Jesus
Were to come back black.
There are so many churches
Where he could not pray
In the U.S.A.
Where entrance to Negroes,
No matter how sanctified,
Is denied,
Where race, not religion,
Is glorified.
But say it—
You may be Crucified.

near to the wild heart of life. he was alone and young and willful and wildhearted

childish and girlish in the air.

there was a month yet to the end of the season,
every day of this month Smolak and i rode on roller-coaster together before large crowds . . .
and while we climbed and dipped and swooped swerved and rose again higher than the ferris wheels and fell, we held on to each other.

whatever gains i ever made were always due to love and nothing else. we hugged each other, the bear and i, with something greater than terror and flew in those gilded cars.

flower power

Love is not all: it is not meat nor drink
Nor slumber nor a roof against the rain;
Nor yet a floating spar to men that sink
And rise and sink and rise and sink again;
Love can not fill the thickened lung with breath,
Nor clean the blood, nor set a fractured bone;
Yet many a man is making friends with death
Even as I speak, for lack of love alone.
It well may be that in a difficult hour,
Pinned down by pain and moaning for release,
Or nagged by want past resolution's power,
I might be driven to sell your love for peace,
Or trade the memory of this night for food.
It well may be. I do not think it would.

Or as Gertrude Stein Says . . .
The sky is as blue as itself,
and the tree is as green as its leaves.
How shall I write a poem about today?

The tree stands—
but the tree has no feet.
The tree leans its head—
but the tree is not tired,
growing without resting,
resting without pausing.

Let me try again.

The wind blows.
How, having no whistle?
The wind sings.
How, having no tune?
The wind sighs.
How, having no heart?
Yet it is lovers who borrow from the wind their softness and storms.

Well then, the wind moves.
How, having no body
but the motion of bodies?

When the sky is as blue as itself,
and the tree is as green as its leaves—
a poem is only taking a child's downy skull gently between your hands and, with not so much breath as might startle a gnat's wing,
whispering,
"Look!"

we stood in the windy city the gypsy boy and i we slept on the breeze in the midnight with a raindrop and tears in our eyes but who's goin to be the one to say it was no good what we done i dare a man to say i'm too young for i'm goin to try for the sun we huddled in the derelict building and when he thought i was asleep he laid his poor coat around my shoulders and shivered there beside me in a heap but who's goin to be the one to say it was no good what we done i dare a man to say i'm too young for i'm goin to try for the sun we sang and cracked the sky with laughter our breath turned to mist in the cold our years put together counted forty but our eyes told the dawn that we were old but who's goin to be the one to say it was no good what we done i dare a man to say i'm too young for i'm goin to try for the sun mirror, mirror hanging in the sky won't you look down what's happening here below i stand here singing to the flowers so very few people really know but who's goin to be the one to say it was no good what we done i dare a man to say i'm too young for i'm goin to try for the sun we stood in the windy city the
